Purpose-Driven Impact

Ward, Volunteer Springfield, VA

"I'm always very careful to make sure the individuals understand what is going on in the story. I get feedback from them either verbally or they express themselves with their hands. They're all involved one way or another," he says. "I think they know that the person reading to them cares about them learning something and hearing something, that there's somebody there who's willing to share some time with them."

Robby, Pathways to Careers Program Fairfax, VA

Before enrolling in Pathways to Careers, Robby volunteered at a bookstore and distributed newspapers for the local newspaper, Fairfax Connection. While his accuracy and strong memory helped him to excel in his tasks, Robby had some difficulties in social situations. The Pathways team helped Robby secure employment in an administrative support position with the Hartwood Foundation, a nonprofit residential service program for people with intellectual disabilities. Robby enjoys his job and feels more comfortable interacting with his colleagues.
